Comprehension Test: The Bronze Bust Mystery

Name _____

Date _____

It was the weekend. Robert and Lucy were staying with their grandfather. They liked staying with Grandad. He was an inventor. He invented new kinds of mobile phones. His best invention was a time-travel phone. You used the time-travel phone to travel through time.

'This weekend I am taking you to the cinema to see a film about the Romans,' Grandad said.

The film was very exciting! It was a story about life in Ancient Rome in the year 130. In the film, there were lots of slaves. The slaves were owned by rich people. The slaves had to work hard for their masters, and they got no money for their work.

The film also showed some exciting chariot races at a place called the Circus Maximus in Rome. There was a gladiator fight at the Colosseum, too. Grandad explained that gladiators were fighters. They fought each other at special shows that the Romans went to watch.

Robert and Lucy talked about the film all the way home.

When they got home, Grandad took Robert and Lucy into his study. Grandad lifted a big, old book off a shelf. The book was all about Ancient Rome. Grandad explained that, at one time, the Romans were ruled by emperors. The book had lots of pictures in it. They showed statues of the emperors. Some of them looked very fierce!

Just then, the telephone rang in the hall. Mrs Green, the maid, was away for the weekend. 'I must go and answer the phone,' said Grandad. He went out of the room. While Grandad was out of the room, Robert and Lucy saw the time-travel phones on Grandad's desk. Robert picked up one and looked at it. 'I wish we could use these to travel back to Ancient Rome,' he said.

'Me, too,' said Lucy. She picked up the other phone. Lucy's eyes widened with excitement. Robert turned the time-travel phone over and over in his hands. He sighed. 'The phones might not even work,' he said.

'Shall we test them and see?' asked Lucy.

'Yes, let's do that,' said Robert. 'If they don't work, it doesn't matter. And if we are worried, we will only stay in Ancient Rome for a few minutes.'
